

The management of acute pancreatitis according to the modern guidelines

G. Botoi¹, O. Andercou², A. Andercou², D. Marian³, A. Tamasan¹, M. Span¹

¹Spitalul Județean de Urgență, Baia Mare, România

²Clinica Chirurgie II, Cluj-Napoca, România

³Clinica Chirurgie II, Tg. Mureș, România

Abstract

Severe acute pancreatitis is a critical illness as the organism that produces a significant mortality despite diagnostic and therapeutic acquisitions. While new mechanisms have been identified for production and were crystallized management principles, a number of controversies remain awaiting resolution in the near future. Aim is to establish, based on their experience and literature data, place the current means of diagnosis and treatment in close correlation with the pathophysiological events of acute pancreatitis.

Key words: acute pancreatitis, pancreatic necrosis

Correspondență:

Dr. Grigore Botoi

Spitalul Județean de Urgență, Baia Mare, România

e-mail: grigbotoi@yahoo.com